HUNTER PEOPLE: REMINISCENCES OF '26 AND '31

Our correspondents remember it well: the buildings, classes, and especially the people—teachers, administrators, and staff.

Helen Fitzpatrick Crabtree '26 remembers people of Hunter High in the 1920s, when classes were held in an unused public school building on West 108th Street.

Our principal, Miss Louisa M. Webster, was a tiny dynamo of a lady. Her favorite quotation was: "A sin of omission is a sin of commission." She flitted along the halls in her long wide skirts, high necked shirtwaist, a bunch of keys dangling from the belt which encircled her "wasp waist," gray hair piled in a bun at the top of her head.

Her secretary, Miss Leycester, was a tall gauntlooking woman, who stood guard at the sacred portals of the "office." I especially recall Miss Leycester because of an incident that stands out in my memory.

At one time, a few of the girls reported that they had seen a "degenerate" in the building. It seemed that this man would suddenly appear on staircases when one or two girls, for some reason, would lag behind or become isolated from the group. We were warned that we must never travel the halls alone or go into the halls or up and down the staircases except as a group, changing classes. However, one day two of the girls ran into the office and hysterically screamed to Miss Leycester that the "degenerate" was on the stairs. Quick as a flash, Miss Leycester seized the first available heavy object that came to hand, a heavy padlock, ran to the stairs and hurled it at the retreating figure of a man. The "degenerate" was never seen again!

Because of the high quality of the teaching and the utter dedication, spirit and enthusiasm of the teachers, the drabness and dullness of this old building were partially overlooked. Iona Logie made the world of Sir Walter Scott glow in our imagination. Marie Genevieve Beirne revived Caesar's Gallic Wars and Cicero's Orations. Miss Johnson made the world of the Phoenicians, the Medes and the Persians, the world of Alexander The Great, come alive. The inspiration of the teachers and the indomitable sparkle, wit, vivacity, optimism and ever dauntless ambition of my classmates have made HCHS a glowing memory throughout the years.

Doris Cohen '31 remembers Miss Webster as well as the school:

"You must wear your gaiters when it rains" Miss Webster admonished us, "and take the stage from the subway station." But I rode down from The Bronx on the Second Avenue "EI," on the open platform between the cars, and my bare knees were as red as my cheeks by the time I arrived at school on a cold winter day.

There was an auditorium at the schol on East 96th Street, but no gymnasium or lunch room. However, when the days started to warm up, we were given

TO COLLEGE HALL OF FAME

Augusta Souza Kappner '62 was inducted into the Hunter College Hall of Fame at the College's 117th Birthday Luncheon on May 2. Augusta, who earned a D.S.W. at Columbia University after graduating from Hunter College, has been president of Borough of Manhattan Community College since 1986. The first black woman designated president of a City University college, she previously served as University Dean for Academic Affairs in charge of adult and continuing education at CUNY's headquarters, and also supervised the freshman skills assessment program and the instructional resource center there. Earlier she was professor and Dean for Continuing Education at La-Guardia Community College, where she created the Astoria Center for Adult and Continuing Education and developed collaborative programs with business, industry, labor, government and community groups. Among the honors and awards she has received are the Whitney Young Academic Fellowship, the U.S. Department of Labor's Public Service Award, and the Ford Foundation Doctoral Fellowship.

EDITORIAL

Your Alumnae/i Association is approaching a milestone, 15 years since its founding. Some of you may remember graduates' organizations before this one. But this is the longest-lived, most active alumnae/i association Hunter has ever had, and the only one that has involved Hunterites of every generation.

We would, of course, like to involve even more of you, in our varied get-togethers and programs during the year as well as at milestone reunions and through the pages of these ALUMNOTES. As we inform you of events and decisions that affect Hunter, we also participate in meetings of campus school committees with the aim of influencing decisions on behalf of future generations of Hunter graduates.

Your dues and contributions likewise affect future alumnae/i and make possible our aid to special projects at the High School, as well as the rediscovery and preservation of documents of the school's—and our own—past. (To those who wonder whether their milestone class gifts have been put to the intended uses, the answer is yes! Purchasing procedures sometimes cause a lag in notification, but we try to inform you periodically on the effort to see that the High School library acquires a complete set of The New York Times and its indexes on microfilm.)

Help make it all possible. Become a member in good standing and send in your dues with the coupon on page 7. Become an active member and bring yourself to the events noted in our calendar on page 5. We want YOU!

Dear Friends.

This past year, and the present one, have been important for the Alumnae/i Association. We have grown qualitatively, and the work done by our Steering Committee has enabled us to reach out in new directions. This letter will bring you up to date on some highlights.

We are planning programs of interest to various special interests, designed to let groups of graduates share experiences and network with others. Among categories we expect to have programs for are volunteers, lawyers, people in the banking and financial world, people with publishing and other communications careers, computer professionals, and teachers. If you have expertise in any of these areas and can contribute to our planning or the programs themselves, please telephone the Alumnae/i office (212-772-4079).

Alumnae/i living in the New York Metropolitan Area received an ALUMNOTES EXTRA this past September—a flyer containing a list of events scheduled for early fall, and some local news, put together by Peggy Betz Perrin '55.

We now have an amenity that we have been lacking—a charming "thank you" card, designed by Fanny Kaufman Casher '28.

Several members of the Steering Committee have been attending monthly meetings with the officers of the public specialized high schools of New York City, where ideas are exchanged and concerns shared. For a report, see the article on page 3. Steering Committee members have also represented your Alumnae/i Association at a series of long-range planning meetings held by the administration of the Campus Schools.

Finally, it became apparent that our Reunions have outgrown the facilities we have used in recent years in the High School cafeteria. We are making arrangements to hold Reunion '88 at Hunter College, with a menu planned and prepared by Paul Kreeger, caterer for the College. More about this in the next issue of ALUMNOTES!

Before I sign off, I want to thank all of you for sending in your dues, your contributions, your letters and comments. I also offer special thanks to the officers and members of the Steering Committee who regularly contribute time, energy and ideas to this Association.

SPECIAL SCHOOLS' ALUMS JOIN TOGETHER

by Eve Rosenzweig '49

Early this year, the Hunter High Alumnae/i Association was invited to attend a meeting of the recently formed Special High Schools Alumni Associations Committee, whose other members are the alumni associations of Bronx Science, Music and Art/Performing Arts, Stuyvesant, and Townsend Harris High Schools. The

MORE BUILDINGS

Rosaline Lieberman Odessey, who graduated in January 1935, recalls entering Hunter High and being "greeted by [Principal] Louisa Webster in the basement of the building at 96th Street. But our first semester at Hunter was spent in an office building at 52nd Street and Seventh Avenue. We traveled from the Bronx on the 7th Avenue subway. On Fridays when we had only a half day of school, we would once a month go with great trepidation to the [nearby] Brass Rail restaurant for a lunch treat."

More recent graduates recalled the "office building" that was home to Hunter in the '70s, as well as the "old college building" on Lexington Avenue that was, for more than three decades, the most stable location Hunter ever had. Susanna McIlwaine, for example, "spent two years at 68th Street, four at the 45th Street office building [both on Lexington Avenue]. What I remember best about 68th Street are the gargovies and the heating system which was tied to the one at the college next door, so our radiators were on full blast until the college warmed up... I recently went back to visit the old building and realized that it had always been dirty and rundown, but we never noticed it, we loved our school so much... One of the major changes brought about by the move was the freedom to leave the building during lunch. We also [could buy food from a lunch cart set up] in the student lounge. The building had no gym or science labs and we had to commute to 68th Street or to a 'Y.' We all adapted well and were very creative about the limitations of our space." For Lili Hirsch Krakowski, a 1940s graduate, memories of Hunter's old building led to a recollection of a triple-subway commute from 97th Street and the West Side.

I went to school by IRT (the express down, the Queens train across—real New Yorkers never take the shuttle—and the Lex local up). In good weather, can you believe that I walked home alone through Central Park? Everything in the old school was always breaking down... One day the teachers' toilets on one floor (or all over) broke down and the faculty had to use "our" johns. One teacher (bless her wherever she is) walked into the restroom to find it nocturnal with cigarette smoke (Chesterfields, please, We were ladies!) She gave us a big grin, proceeded with her plans, and left.

committee was formed to define common problems and goals, and to determine how all alumni of the specialized schools could work together to benefit both their schools and the cause of education of the gifted.

The initial meetings were exploratory, and no agreement on an agenda has been reached. The alumni representatives have shared information on building up alumni associations, including funding and fund raising, mailing list development, bulletins, programs and reunions, and discussed the role of alumni in their schools, including relationships with present-day faculty, parents, and students.

Hunter High representatives have been attending monthly meetings since last March. Association President Bunny Hauser, along with Peggy Perrin and Eve Rosenzweig, represented Hunter at the first four meetings. Executive Vice President Judy Shapiro, who attended the July meeting, and Eve Rosenzweig will be representing our association at future meetings.

COMING EVENTS

We can look forward to a delightful evening of theater on Saturday, January 16 at 8:00 pm. Our winter theater party will be the Bronx Opera Company's production of Sir John in Love by Ralph Vaughan Williams. This beautiful English comic opera is based on Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor and includes the "Fantasia on Greensleeves." We will have excellent orchestra seats in the Hunter College Playhouse (68th Street between Park and Lexington Avenues—enter off courtyard) at a group discount price of $10.50 per ticket. So, to find out how Falstaff fares at love, send in the coupon on page 7 to reserve seats for yourself and your friends. Tickets will be mailed out approximately one week before performance date.

Plan to be on Manhattan's chic East 57th Street, specifically 149, between Lexington and Third Avenues, on Sunday, February 7 at 12:30 RM. where an afternoon of good food, company and conversation awaits you at our annual Winter Brunch. It will be held at The Magic Pan, known for its famous crepe specialties and courteous service. Take the elevator near the entrance to our private room on the second floor. Start with a screwdriver, bloody Mary, mimosa, glass of wine, soda or juice, and a mixed green or orange almond salad. Entrees include eggs benedict, farmers' eggs, crepe St. Jacques, crepes Cordon Bleu and apple delight crepe, chicken divan crepe, and ratatouille crepe. A beverage concludes the meal. The cost is $10.75, gratuities included. So, reminisce and network, meet classmates for milestone planning or a between-reunions reunion. Do come! You will enjoy! Send in the tearoff on page 7.

All about you Eyou Eyou...

"I'm still singing—now in a Jazz-Gospel Quartet," writes recently married Liza QUINTERO Diehl '83 from Everett, MA., adding, "Yes, it was Danny, the cop, but he's guit now, thank goodness!"... Jill K. SLATER '84, Brooklyn College '87, summa cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa, is now at Downstate Medical School to complete the seven year Brooklyn College-Downstate B.A./M.D. program. She married Marc Waldman in July.... Other future doctors include Robert GUA-DAGNO '83, studying at Albany Medical School, Lisa NOCERA '83, at SUNY Buffalo, and Ted LOUIE '83, at SUNY Stony Brook. Ted, in spite of his heavy med school schedule, finds time to write a monthly column, "The Philatelic Mystery Corner," for the magazine, Stamps.... Melissa METZ '82, B.A. in computer science at Barnard, is pursuing a master's in computer science at Columbia where she met her husband, Fuat C. Baran. She's working at Columbia's Computer Center where she was joined in June by Ellen GER-MAIN '80.... The artistic career of Janet A. LEE '80, a professional singer with regional opera companies and choruses in the New York area, was advanced when she made her solo operatic debut at Avery Fisher Hall in April. Janet wrote a very moving letter in tribute to her teacher and friend, Toshiaki Kunii, who died of AIDS last February, and urges support not only for AIDS victims but for their caregivers as well.

1970s

Andrea BOCKMAN Stack '72 has been elected vice president of investor relations for Sara Lee Corporation, Chicago. Our thanks to Miriam Skrivanek Settle for providing us with some wonderful memorabilia of the class of January '51, including the script of the senior play, and the following document, here reprinted in its entirety.

SENIOR PROCLAMATION

We, the Seniors of ninteen hundred and fifty-one, in evidence of our supreme superiority, declare that all inferior members of the lower school must present themselves on November 17th, nineteen hundred and fifty, dressed as their true inner selves, or in the language comprehensible to individuals of low intelligence, all lower termers must come dressed as devils.

The super, superior, supreme Seniors, in accordance with this decree, do further declare that:

- 1. All lower termers shall wear tails, the number of which must correspond with their term, while the junior highs shall wear one tail looped up to half its length in token of the fact that they are not yet full grown.
 - 2. All lower termers must wear horns, two for each head.
- 3. Since all devils are lifeless creatures without blood, no make-up what-so-ever may be worn, and the only facial decoration shall be a black goatee, a known symbol of all educated devils.
- 4. Since it is common knowledge that a devil's heart is black, all lower termers must wear a black heart with a list of crimes for which they were sent to the Underworld pinned in full view.
- 5. Since all lower termers are not yet inhabitants of the lower world, but walk the earth suffering for their former sins by failing exams, each inferior being must carry candy money as payment to the Seniors in the hope of being allowed to cross the Styx to their final resting place.
- 6. In a moment of compassion for the many trials inflicted upon such wandering devils, the supreme Seniors declare that lower termers may ride the elevator. However, since all lower termers are devils, they may only ride down in the elevator and may only take it from the basement.
- 7. All lower termers must refrain from wearing white as this color is a symbol of purity, but must paint their nails a bright red (the number of painted nails corresponding to the wearer's term, and the junior highs painting one half of all ten nails).
- 8. Since the angelic Seniors protect even a devil's possessions, and since any jewelry worn by a devil would melt, all jewelry will be forbidden.
- 9. So that the inferiority of every lower termer may be noted immediately, every inferior being must write the number of her term in the color of blood on the back of her hands.
- 10. Each lower termer, in order to help build the bonfire which will eventually cleanse her of her sins, must carry the following:

Junior Highs must carry a piece of coal.

Freshmen must carry a paper match a foot long.

Sophomores must carry ashes.

Juniors must carry a cardboard shovel a foot long.

Seventh termers must carry a candle.

Beware the Senior colors.

Beware all violations of the Senior word!

permission to go out on the auditorium roof during the lunch hour. (The auditorium was on the ground floor, and the school was built up in a "U" around it). We brought balls and jump-ropes from home the next day, and used the school's chalk to draw hopscotch games, and had a great time before the ceiling fell in on the auditorium below.

We had to be assembled in the basement for the lecture we got that afternoon. Miss Webster was livid. She had thought, she said, that we "would promenade like young ladies. Instead, we had behaved like, like..." For a moment she was speechless. Then she burst out. "Like hoodlums!"

Whom do you remember? Write and tell us!

No reporting to the principal, no fuss. One of the finest lessons in civility and discretion I ever got. More: it was a full-length course in the meaning of Right to Privacy, First and Fifth Amendment, etc. Lots of Hunter teachers were such models of teaching by example. We Hunterites did not have to wait for the '60s and its sloganeering to know that Sisterhood is Powerful. We learned as scruffy little girls in a school whose "physical plant" was medieval—but whose spirit soared!!

Your reminiscences have been so wonderful that this is about to become a long-running serial. In our next issue—well, just wait and see.
